The Massachusetts Special Commission on After School and Out of School Time Announces Public Hearing

Special Commission to Convene Tenth and Final Public Hearing in Boston, September 25, 5 PM - 8 PM

Boston, Massachusetts - September 24, 2007 — The Massachusetts Special Commission on After School and Out of School Time announces its tenth and final public hearing to be held at the Josiah Quincy Elementary School on Tuesday, September 25 from 5 PM - 8 PM in the Auditorium located at 885 Washington Street in Boston. Before the public hearing, from 3 PM—4 PM, the Special Commission members will be visiting the Roxbury Preparatory Charter School at 120 Fisher Avenue in Mission Hill. Founded in 1999 the Roxbury Preparatory Charter School is a 6-8 grade public school serving 200 students. Its mission is to prepare students to enter, succeed and graduate from college.

This Special Commission was created by the Massachusetts Legislature to "study and recommend how to" define and "better coordinate, expand, finance and improve accessible, affordable, and quality out of school time programming for school age children in all settings in Massachusetts."

Led by Senator Thomas McGee (D-Lynn), the Chair of the Senate's Labor and Workforce Development Committee and Representative Marie St. Fleur (D-Boston), the Vice-Chair of the House Committee on Ways and Means, the 36 member Commission has committed to holding ten public hearings throughout the state to gather input about the Commonwealth's afterschool system. Youth, parents, community and faith-based providers, law enforcement officials, educators, funders, business and other community leaders are expected to attend and provide testimony.

"We have a historic opportunity to gain a better understanding of the importance of afterschool programs in the lives of children, youth and families," said Senator Thomas McGee. "Since a quality workforce is a linchpin of the afterschool system, we need to identify solutions to strengthen it. We look forward to gathering information from the public hearings and site visits that will help us figure out this and other ways to better serve children and youth when they are not in school."

"Currently, Massachusetts provides afterschool programs to approximately 20% of the Commonwealth's school age population," noted Representative Marie St. Fleur. "It is well documented that the time period between 2PM and 6PM is the most hazardous, if unsupervised, for children of that age. It is clear that we need to closely examine how public/private partnerships can leverage existing resources to serve more children and youth to coordinate and strengthen a system of afterschool and expanded learning that promotes their healthy development. The public hearings and site visits will help us to hear from all stakeholders on this important matter."

"At Roxbury Prep, we believe that our students and families deserve enriching extended day/out of school time programs", said Joshua Phillips, Co-Director of the Roxbury Preparatory Charter School. "Unfortunately, most out of school time activities are considered 'extras' by many schools and communities. However, we feel that they are an essential component of a child's education and help us accomplish our mission of preparing students to enter, succeed in, and graduate from college."

1.1 Million School Aged Children and Youth in Massachusetts

There are 1.1 million school aged children and youth ages 5-18 that live in Massachusetts. Of that group, 720,000 are children ages 5-13 and 380,000 are youth ages 14-19. Current state funding serves 205,500 children and youth leaving nearly 80% without access to quality and enriching after-school and summer opportunities.

The Massachusetts Special Commission on After School and Out of School Time intends to study this issue more in-depth. In addition to holding the nine public hearings, it will also convene three working groups that will 1) analyze information and access issues; 2) identify quality, workforce and professional development concerns, and 3) determine how the afterschool system in the Commonwealth can be sustained. The Special Commission expects to issue a report in the fall of 2007 that will have recommendations in these areas which will strengthen the Commonwealth's afterschool system.
